R sponse to Amendment

1. The amendment filed on January 29, 2004 has been fully considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

- Claims 1-3, 9-1113-14 and 16 have been canceled.
- Claims 4-8, 12 and 15 are presented for examination.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 4 and 6-8 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Harvey et al USPN. (6487583).

As per claim 4, Harvey et al teach a method for extending a subscribing community and providing userservices using a Personal Address Book, said method comprising the steps of:

establishing a first Personal Address Book (address book), said first Personal Address Book containing a plurality of entries, each of said entries having associated connection

Art Unit: 2153

information and an associated user [col. 4, line 44-61; col. 7, line 24-48 and col. 13, lines 26-65]; marking selected ones of said plurality of entries [col. 4, line 49-61; col. 11, lines 16-37 and col. 13, lines 26-65]; sending an invitation to said associated users of said entries marked in said marking step by utilizing said connection information in said entries marked in said marking step [col. 4, line 44-61; col. 11, line 16-50]; and receiving acceptances from the associated user of selected ones of said entries marked in said marking step and, in response to receiving each of said acceptances, creating Personal Address Book [col. 13, lines 6-26; col. 14, line 65 to col. 15. line 23 and col. 17, lines 10-42].

Although, Harvey et al shows substantial features of the claimed invention including a communication address book such as email address book and chat address book, he does silent regarding creating a second personal address book. However, Harvey et al discloses creating new community by generating an invitation message to other users and inviting them to join the community [col. 13, lines 26-65]. In Harvey's system a user invites people from an address book and pals list into a community and a client application reads a communication address book and pals list and put the names and addresses into a list [col. 17, lines 27-42], hence creating a second address list. Therefore, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to use the newly created list containing names and addresses as a second personal address book for the advantage of organizing and maintaining an up-to-date address book that is easily accessible to its owners and to utilize it for sending personalized messages to online community members and friends.

As per claim 6, Harvey et al as modified teach the method of claim 4 wherein said step of establishing said Personal Address Book includes creating a new Personal Address Book [col. 4, line 44-61 and col. 13, line 19-65].

As per claim 7, Harvey et al teach the method of claim 6, further comprising the step of filling said entries of said Personal Address Book with information [col. 7, line 24-48].

As per claim 8, Harvey et al teach the method of claim 6, further comprising the step of creating a linkage to a plurality of services, wherein said services include e-mail [col. 6, line 47-59].

3. Claims 5, and 12 and 16 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Harvey et al USPN 6487583) in view of Lim et al USPN (6574599).

As per claim 5, although Harvey et al shows substantial features of the claimed invention, he does not explicitly show receiving a voice message from a user.

Art Unit: 2153

Nonetheless, this feature is well known in the art and would have been an obvious modification of the system disclosed by Harvey et al, as evidenced by Lim et al USPN. (6574599). In analogous art, Lim et al disclose a unified messaging system that receives verbal (voice) input from a user through a telephone. The verbal (voice) input includes an action word and called party identity or contacting data [abstract].

Giving the teaching of Lim et al, a person of ordinary skill in the art would have readily recognized the desirability and the advantage of modifying Harvey et al by employing the system of Lim et al for permitting a user to employ voice-based commands to access various data-centric and telephony-centric communication services of a computer-implemented unified messaging service and/or to issue, in a natural and intuitive manner, complex communication requests involving more than one telephone number/email address [col. 3, lines 57-63].

As per claims 12 and 15, Harvey et al and Lim et al teach the invention as modified and explained in claim 4 above and later in claim 13.

Harvey et al access means for accessing a Personal Address Book, said Personal Address Book containing a plurality of callers [fig. 3 and col. 4, lines 2-11; col. 7 line 63 to col. 8, line 2];

Harvey et al teaches selection means, coupled to said access means, for selecting callers (users), (Lim teaches extensively about callers) in said Personal Address Book as invited callers [col. 13, lines 6-26];

Art Unit: 2153

contact means, coupled to said selection means, for contacting said invited callers and asking said selected callers to join a subscribing community [see Harvey col. 13, lines 6-26];

reception means for receiving an answer from said invited callers [see Harvey col. 13, lines 6-26]; and creation means, coupled to said reception means, for creating a plurality of Personal Address Books in response to receiving said answer from said invited callers [see Harvey col. 7, line 24-48 and col. 13, lines 6-26; col. 14, line 65 to col. 15 line 23].

Although, Harvey and Lim show substantial features of the claimed invention, they do not explicitly show creating a second personal address book. However, Harvey et al discloses creating new community by generating an invitation message to other users and inviting them to join the community [col. 13, lines 26-65]. A user invites people from an address book and pals list into a community and a client application reads a communication address book and pals list and put the names and addresses into a list [col. 17, lines 27-42]. Therefore, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to modify Harvey and Lim by employing the newly created list containing names and addresses as a second personal address book for the advantage of organizing and maintaining an up-to-date address book that is easily accessible to its owners and to utilize it for sending personalized messages to online community members and friends.
